Imagine standing alone on the edge of a dark forest. Above you beams a full glistening moon in the clear night sky, behind you lurks a wall of snarling amplifiers, as fierce as a pack of wolves. In front of you...well, that's something you'll have to discover when you step INTO THE WOODS...

INTO THE WOODS delivers an assortment of lyrically creative rock songs layered with ambient industrial textures. Rich with harmonies, roaring guitars, scissoring bass and intriguing arrangements, Illicit Eve have honed in on their strengths and defined their sound with their second release.

Kicking off with 'The Sound', a rock explosion which grabs hold of you with it's opening riff and doesn't let go. Launching you straight into the single 'They Don't Make Boys Like They Used To', a quirky rock tune with a dirty pop melody that channels the frustration of comparing anyone new to the one you can't get over. The album progresses through disco grunge track '11:11', to more industrial tracks, including 'Coldest Winter' and the closing track 'Heavy Lung'.

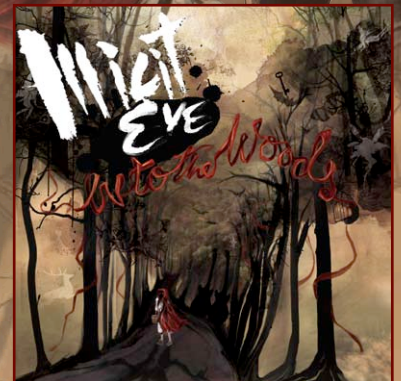

INTO THE WOODS is full of dark twists, turns and hidden surprises just waiting to be discovered.

Illicit Eve have come a long way since they first started as a rock trio in late 2004. With various back line changes, Illicit Eve are now a rock duo, and one of Adelaide's best rock acts.

Emily Smart and Fliss Freeman are the female leads of the fashionable and enterprising pop-rock duo Illicit Eve. Gifted with super-talented musicians, whose dexterity on guitar provides a further string to their bow.

Illicit Eve is more than your average rock group.

Smart's song-writing skills and soulful vocals are an ideal focal point over Freeman's virtuosic bass guitar playing, and their unique blend of harmony is refreshingly.
